

Preface

Ladies & Gentlemen,
Dear Colleagues!

Along with the beautiful and sunny weather and a better mood due to the stabilisation of the epidemiological situation regarding the COVID-19 pandemic, we present you the next issue of the quarterly Family Medicine and Primary Care Review.

We are very happy to announce that we are returning to the tradition of publishing recommendations regarding diagnostics, treatment and prevention. In the current issue, you will find "Recommendations of the Polish Society of Gynaecologists and Obstetricians, Polish Paediatric Society, Polish Society of Family Medicine, Polish Society of Vaccinology, Polish Society of Oncological Gynaecology and Polish Society for Colposcopy and Cervical Pathophysiology on prophylactic vaccinations against infections with human papillomaviruses in Poland".

We are very glad that our journal inspires readers to express opinions sent and published as letters to editor ("Virtual-reality rehabilitation for inpatient elderly leukemic patients: psychological and physical roles during the fourth COVID-19 wave").

Review papers will certainly update, organise and broaden your knowledge on immunisation of patients during immunotherapy, the role of sirolimus in the treatment of vascular anomalies and the current legal status related to healthcare associated infections.

Among the original articles, many deal with infections caused by SARS-CoV-2, taking into account very different aspects: attitudes of family medicine residents in Ankara towards COVID-19 vaccines, the number of pulmonary embolism cases during the COVID-19 pandemic, benefits of standard dose and pulse dose vitamin D in the high-risk and confirmed hypovitaminosis D population with COVID-19.

The remaining manuscripts concern, inter alia, an important topic of interpersonal communication ("Communication in patient-physician relationships in Turkey: opinions of family medicine residents") and ethical issues ("Dignified death: a concept analysis and implications for nursing").

Careful reading of the table of contents will allow you to choose the most interesting articles, which we hope will help you in your work.

We wish you interesting reading and wonderful holidays 2022!
